

Teens are three times more likely to have a fatal car crash at night

News Agency
WASHINGTON, D.C. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that teens who have recently acquired their driver's license are three times more likely to be involved in a fatal car crash at night than during the day. Parents are the ultimate authority when it comes to driving at night. Driving at night is a privilege, not a right.

Does your teen drive at night?

Teen drivers need extra rules to keep them safe. To learn more about the rules, and ways to discuss them with your kids, visit nhtsa.gov
