Community-Based Impaired-Driving Programs

Local Ordinances and Other Strategies Addressing Impaired Driving

A. Introduction

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) recognizes that impaired driving is a complicated issue that cannot be addressed with one solution. “Alcohol-impaired-driving¹ fatalities are affected by several external factors, including geography, urbanization, road structure and conditions, and economic activity, as well as by a State’s laws and programs” (NHTSA, 2011, p. 1-2). Strategies that address impaired driving focus on educating people on dangers of driving impaired, keeping people from becoming too impaired to drive, preventing them from driving after drinking, stopping them while driving impaired, and keeping DUI offenders from repeating the behavior.

While many impaired-driving programs are implemented at the State level, NHTSA recognizes that the lack of resources and political challenges may make implementation of needed and effective legislation and programs difficult. In addition, States may find that some programs are effective in some communities but not others. This publication is intended to be a resource to help communities identify appropriate, effective, and promising strategies and legislation that can be implemented on a local level. It is not intended as a how-to-guide, but rather describes and provides examples of each strategy. Leaders and program managers within communities may find this useful in helping to jump start or reenergize their efforts to reduce impaired driving.

This publication is divided into three primary sections: (1) understanding a community’s impaired-driving problem, (2) strategies that reduce impaired driving, and (3) references and appendix.

As used in this publication, the term “community-based programs” refers to those programs that can be implemented on a local level without the need for State support or approval and that may or may not require supporting State legislation. While this publication describes a number of community-based strategies, it primarily focuses on the use of local ordinances to address impaired driving and underage drinking. Typically, local jurisdictions have the authority to apply stricter local ordinances but may not supersede State legislation.

No scientific methodology was used to determine the inclusion of these strategies, programs, or policies in this publication. Selection was based on history, experience, effectiveness, or promise. In addition, strategies recommended or suggested by reputable sources, such as the Surgeon General; the National Advisory Council on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism’s Task Force; National Research Council-Institute of Medicine; U.S. Department of Education’s Higher Education Center; the American Public Health

Association; and the American Medical Association are included. Consideration was also given to those that may have the potential to be implemented or be adopted by local jurisdictions, municipalities, or communities.

B. Understanding Your Community's Impaired-driving Problem

Often, a community's effort to address a problem is inspired by an unfortunate tragedy. In a hurry to address the issue, communities may be driven to advocate for the creation of State legislation or policy changes, only to learn that the process is difficult and lengthy, and that its impact is not readily seen or may not address the specific community problem.

NHTSA recommends that communities take a deeper look at their impaired-driving problem by answering who, what, where, when, how, and, if possible, why. NHTSA's publication, The Art of Appropriate Evaluation: A Guide for Highway Safety Program Managers (NHTSA, 2008) highlights how to identify traffic safety problems and consider solutions with the most potential for success. Once a community's impaired-driving problem is understood, there are a variety of strategies to consider. The Art of Appropriate Evaluation acquaints the reader with the reasons for evaluation and the basics of how to conduct one.

C. Community-Based Strategies to Reduce Impaired Driving

C.1. Communications and Outreach

Focusing the needed attention to a community's identified traffic safety problem is challenging and may be costly. Communities across the country have used social norming campaigns and media advocacy efforts as strategies to support local efforts to reduce impaired driving.

C.1.1. Social Norming Campaigns

Social norming campaigns are designed to change behavior by publicizing or promoting the true behaviors of a group. They are based on the premise that people behave according to their perception of the behaviors of the majority, the "norm." Unfortunately, perceptions of the norm can be inaccurate and the occurrence of behaviors overestimated. Social norming campaigns are developed by collecting information on the target audience's actual behavior and attitudes and using media campaigns to educate the audience of the findings to correct their perceptions (Linkenbach, 2006). By creating an accurate perception, people may change their behavior to reflect the true norm.

A study conducted at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, found a 22-percent decline in the proportion of students with BACs above .08 g/dL after implementation of a social norming campaign (Foss, Marchetti, & Holladay, 2001). Researchers measured change by obtaining voluntary breath tests of students leaving and returning to campus prior to and after a social norming campaign was implemented.

C.1.2. Media Advocacy Efforts

In the context of public health, media advocacy is the strategic use of free or earned media to advance public health policies. It relies on news coverage to shape the public debate on health issues and pressure policymakers to support or oppose a specific policy. It can be a useful strategy to educate local policymakers on the benefits of instituting a policy or implementing a program strategy. The American Public Health Association's (APHA) Media Advocacy Manual and the Centre for Health Promotion of the University of Toronto' Media Advocacy Workbook explains how to use media to address public health issues (APHA, Health Communications Unit, 2000).

C.2. Prevention of Impaired Driving

Prevention strategies aim to reduce risky alcohol consumption and prevent people who are alcohol impaired from driving. Alcohol screening and brief intervention (ASBI), alternative transportation, designated drivers, and responsible beverage service are common strategies used to prevent impaired driving.

C.2.1. Alcohol Screening and Brief Intervention

Typically administered by a health care provider, alcohol screening consists of an interview to determine a person's level and frequency of drinking. If a person is found to be potentially at risk for alcohol use problems, the health care provider conducts a brief intervention--- a short counseling session designed to assist the person in confronting the negative consequences of his or her alcohol consumption.

Impaired driving is often a symptom of the problem of alcohol misuse. About 14 million American adults suffer from alcohol abuse or alcoholism, and more than 100,000 people die from alcohol-related diseases and injuries every year (Grant, Hartford, Dawson, Chou, Dufour, & Pickering, 1994; Stinson, Nephew, Dufour, & Grant, 1996, as cited in NIAAA, 2003, p.1). Research has demonstrated that screening and brief intervention for alcohol problems can be effective. For non-alcohol-dependent patients, brief intervention has been found to be effective in moderating alcohol consumption (Whitlock, Polen, Green, et al., 2004). For alcohol-dependent patients, brief intervention is effective in motivating patients to enter treatment.

The American College of Surgeons' Committee on Trauma requires Level I and Level II trauma centers have mechanisms to identify patients with alcohol drinking problems. Level I must also be able to provide an intervention for the identified problem drinkers. Professional associations and government agencies such as the Committee on Trauma and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have developed publications on how to implement ASBI in trauma centers. Two such guides include Alcohol Screening and Brief Intervention for Trauma Patients (American College of Surgeons, n.d.) and Screening and Brief Interventions for Unhealthy Alcohol Use: A Step-by-Step Implementation Guide for Trauma Centers (Higgins-Biddle, Hungerford, & Cates-Wessel, 2009).

In recent years, communities across the Nation have begun to use ASBI in a variety of other settings including college campuses and in the workplace. Documents addressing screening and brief intervention are available on NHTSA's Web site.

C.2.2. Alternative Transportation

In the context of impaired driving, alternative transportation, typically called ride service programs, is using transportation other than one's own vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. From the use of personal vehicles, limousines, buses, taxis trolleys, scooters, or tow service, the goal of these programs is to prevent injuries by providing drivers an alternative to driving impaired (Decina, Foss, Tucker, Goodwin, & Sohn, 2009, p.3). Characteristics of these programs vary by mode of transportation, organization type, and operation. One example is a service that takes impaired people and their vehicles home. Studies have shown that these programs have the potential to reduce impaired driving. Decina et al. (2009) concluded that programs that have shown promise are easily accessible, readily available, and can be easily integrated into people's activities. NHTSA published the report Alternative Transportation Programs: A Countermeasure for Reducing Impaired Driving (Report No. DOT HS 811 188). This publication describes and provides brief summaries of a variety of ride service programs.

C.2.3. Designated Driver

A designated driver is a person who agrees not to drink alcohol and to safely drive others home after they have been drinking. Sound designated driver programs include advanced planning, coordination with a variety of local community organizations and representatives, and clear and targeted messages and guidelines to get people home safely. While a practice encouraged by NHTSA, a systematic review of research studies on designated driver programs showed an increased use of designated drivers but insufficient evidence on its impact on reducing drinking and driving (Ditter, Elder, Shults, et al., 2005; and NHTSA, 2011, p. 1-45).

C.2.4. Responsible Beverage Service

Responsible beverage service (RBS) programs are intended to prevent sales to minors² and over-service to intoxicated patrons, in turn preventing alcohol-impaired driving. RBS programs include development of standards, practices, and procedures for the sale and service of alcohol as well as training on compliance with laws, identification verification, and techniques to monitor sales and service. RBS programs vary widely and, therefore, evaluations have not been consistent (Grube, 2007, p. 22). A systematic review of five server training evaluations found that server training along with management support reduced patrons' intoxication levels (Shults et al., 2001, as cited in NHTSA, 2011, p. 1-43).

C.3. Deterrence

C.3.1. Local Ordinances

Local ordinances are laws established and enforced by municipalities. This section describes local ordinances that may not be covered under State statutes. States typically have laws governing the use, distribution, sale, and taxation of alcoholic beverages. NHTSA conducted a search using the Internet, research study references, and subject matter experts to gather a list of the types of ordinances that may be used to address impaired driving and underage drinking. These ordinances are typically categorized as addressing social access to alcohol, promoting responsible selling and service, or improving the social environment. It is not an all-inclusive list, but it includes frequently adopted ordinances that have some research validity or show promise. Explanations of some of these types of ordinances follow and some examples are provided in the appendix.

NHTSA does not endorse or purport that the included ordinances are models; rather these serve to provide the reader descriptions of ordinances. Communities should consider whether an ordinance can be implemented and enforced, and whether it reflects the needs of their community.

² For this publication, minor is defined as being under the age of 21.

Social Access to Alcohol

Alcohol Restrictions in Public Locations

Communities can prohibit or restrict the use of alcohol on public property such as parks, beaches, and parking lots. These types of ordinances can deter alcohol-fueled disturbances, fighting, vandalism, youth access to alcohol, and overconsumption of alcohol. A study of 97 cities across the United States found those that banned alcohol consumption in public places and had more restrictions at sporting events experienced fewer alcohol-related³ traffic fatalities (Cohen, Mason & Scribner, 2002).

Alcohol Retail Density Limits

Controlling the density of alcohol outlets helps reduce overconcentration of alcohol sales and limits availability of alcohol. Limiting the number of alcohol licenses in an established geographic area allows for more balanced services to a community. There are a greater number of alcohol-related injury crashes in cities with higher alcohol outlet densities (Scribner, Mackinnon, & Dwyer, 1994). Research indicates that a 1-percent increase in outlet density translates to a .54-percent increase in alcohol-related crashes. A city of 50,000 residents with 100 alcohol outlets would experience an additional 2.7 crashes for each new outlet opened.

Conditional Use Permit – Hours of Operation

Conditional use permits are granted by municipalities for businesses within zoning districts that are subject to additional requirements. A conditional use permit is a formal consent by a local governing body to operate a business by meeting specific requirements such as a minimum distance from schools or restriction on hours of operation. Conditional use permits allow flexibility to determine if a proposed land use on a specific site will be compatible with the environment and the community's general or master plan. Municipalities have included restrictions on hours of operation and minimum distances from specific facilities frequented by youth such as schools, churches, and play areas. Some communities have restrictions on refrigerated or single-service sales of alcoholic beverages and sales by specific types of retailers such as gas stations. In 2009, Arlington Heights, Illinois, established a ban on refrigeration of single-serve alcoholic beverage containers of 40 ounces or less at alcohol off-premise retail outlets (Parker, McCaffree, & Stiles, 2011).

Several studies on the hours for selling alcoholic beverages showed an impact on sales and traffic crashes (Grube, 2007, p.17). A study in New Mexico found a 29-percent increase in alcohol-related crashes and a 42-percent increase in alcohol-related crash fatalities on Sundays after sales of packaged alcohol were allowed on that day (McMillan & Lapham, 2006, as cited in Grube, 2007).

³ NHTSA defines alcohol-related as any measurable amount of alcohol. Many of the studies cited in this publication did not indicate BAC levels when referring to alcohol-related traffic crashes or fatalities.

Dram Shop

Dram shop laws make a business that sells alcoholic drinks or a host who serves liquor to a person who is obviously intoxicated strictly liable to anyone injured by the drunken patron or guest. Some States without such laws, like South Dakota, have statutes that protect licensees from being sued for injury or death resulting from the sales or service of alcohol; individual communities in such States nevertheless have enacted dram shop ordinances. A systematic review of eleven studies found that dram shop liability laws reduced motor vehicle crash fatalities (Rammohan et al., 2011). Researchers found a range of 3.7 percent to 11.3 percent, or median of 6.4 percent, reduction in alcohol-related motor vehicle fatalities associated with jurisdictions with dram shop laws.

Exterior Parking Lot Lighting

Exterior parking lot lighting requirements mandate that alcohol retailers with parking lots keep them well lit during operating hours. Good exterior lighting may deter youth from asking adults to purchase alcohol for them and allows employees and police to better identify adults who are purchasing alcohol for underage individuals. A well-lit parking lot may also deter people from participating in risky behaviors outside of on- and off-premise alcohol-retail outlets. Typically, exterior parking lot lighting requirements are typically not stand-alone ordinances, but rather are included in other types of ordinances such as an exterior lighting plan as part of a business zoning ordinance or conditional use permit. Natural surveillance, a crime prevention strategy that uses environmental design, suggests the use of design to deter criminal behavior by, for example, maximizing visibility in parking lots with proper lighting (Bureau of Justice Assistance, 2011).

Keg Registration

Keg registration requires that retailers mark, track, and monitor all beer kegs and who purchases them. Typically, the adult purchaser must sign that they will be responsible for the service of alcohol and will not provide or allow others to provide alcohol to minors. This enables police officers to identify the adult purchaser when underage individuals are caught drinking beer from kegs. A study of 97 U.S. communities found that requiring keg registration lowered traffic fatality rates (Cohen, Mason, & Scribner, 2002).

Party Assembly Ordinances

A party assembly ordinance, also called noise, loud party, or open house assembly ordinances, may be used to control sound levels and alcohol service at large private or public gatherings of people. Communities across the country have recognized the potential use of these ordinances to prevent unruly behavior and deterrence of parties that may draw underage drinkers (Meztger, 2011; City of Phoenix, 2010). When responding to reported high levels of noise officers can check for alcohol service to underage drinkers.

Open-Containers Ordinances

An open-container ordinance prohibits people from publicly consuming or possessing an open container of alcohol. This ordinance allows communities to discourage people from drinking alcoholic beverages while driving. It also helps communities to address issues such as public drunkenness that can be a public nuisance, disturbance, or lead to other criminal activity. According to a 2002 study, alcohol-involved fatal crashes were proportionately higher in States without open-container laws (Stuster et al., 2002).

Social Host

Some communities have enacted ordinances that allow fines to be imposed on parents or other adults when underage drinking parties are held on their property. This may encourage adults to monitor youth to prevent underage drinking parties from occurring. According to MADD, more than 150 cities and counties and 24 States have adopted social host ordinances and laws. Some research indicates that social host liability laws are associated with reductions in drinking and driving and alcohol-related traffic fatalities (Grube, 2007c).

Special Event Licenses

Many communities require permits for special events. Those event venues that plan on selling and serving alcohol may be required to obtain temporary permits which limit where, what, how much, and how long alcohol sales and service may take place during an event. Communities may also require security and training for alcohol sales and service as part of the special event license. These types of controls are consistent with research that shows controls on availability of alcohol reduce alcohol consumption and related problems (Prevention Research Center, 2004).

Youth may have easy access to alcohol at community events, obtaining it either through friends or purchasing it themselves. Some communities have required designated drinking areas at special events that prohibit entrance to underage patrons and require training for all servers.

Promoting Responsible Selling and Serving

Alcoholic Drink Promotions

Ordinances regulating alcohol promotions may help communities to address the potential for overconsumption of alcoholic beverages. These ordinances usually control for the type of promotion, quantity of alcohol, and how long the promotion may take place. Ordinances may also determine how and where the sales of alcoholic beverages may be promoted. Alcoholic drink promotions have been found to be associated with higher rates of heavy episodic drinking (Wechsler et al., 2000). Heavy episodic drinking has been found to be a contributor to high risk behaviors. Those who drink heavily on a given occasion are more likely to experience negative outcomes (e.g., injury, driving after drinking, alcohol dependence) compared with those who do not drink heavily on that occasion (e.g., Knight et al., 2003; Midanik et al., 1996; Wechsler, Davenport, Dowdall, Moeykens, & Castillo, 1994; Wechsler, Dowdall, Maenner, Gledhill-Hoyt, & Lee, 1998; Wechsler & Nelson, 2001).

Banning Home Alcohol Deliveries

The transaction of home deliveries occurs outside of a controlled environment. Controlled environments serve to deter sales to minors or intoxicated patrons. In controlled environments such as convenience stores, there may be video surveillance, cash registers programmed to restrict specific product sales without age verification, or customers who may witness the sales exchange. With home deliveries it is difficult to control for proper age verification or determine whether customers are obviously intoxicated. Surveys conducted as part of the Communities Mobilizing for Change on Alcohol project in Minnesota and Wisconsin of 12th graders, 18- to 20-year-olds and of commercial alcohol outlets found: 10 percent of the surveyed 12th graders and 7.3 percent of the 18- to 20-year-olds reported having purchased delivered alcoholic beverages within the past year.

Responsible Beverage Server (RBS) Training

RBS training provides licensed alcohol-retailers the skills and knowledge to avoid selling to minors and obviously intoxicated patrons. Training can stress the importance of checking identification and teaching servers and sellers how to identify fake identification. See section C.2.4 for further information on RBS.

Alcohol Server Certification or Licensing

Some States and municipalities require persons to be licensed and certified to sell or serve alcohol. This is to ensure that sellers and servers understand the laws and liabilities of sales and service of alcohol.

Posting Warning Signs at Establishments Where Alcohol Is Served

In all States it is illegal to furnish alcohol to minors. Warning signs educate and remind adults of the legal consequences for providing alcohol to minors. A study conducted of Oregon alcohol retailers found alcohol purchases were less likely at stores with a posted underage alcohol sale warning sign (Paschall et al., 2007).

THE SOCIAL ENVIRONMENT

Billboards and Signage

Communities may restrict and limit the placement of billboards and signage. The Board on Children, Youth, and Families of the National Research Council and the Institute of Medicine's Committee on Developing a Strategy to Reduce and Prevent Underage Drinking recommend precaution in the placement and promotion of alcohol advertisements by alcohol companies and advertisers (National Research Council & Institute of Medicine, 2004). While there have been strong arguments against banning or restricting alcohol and tobacco billboard advertisements based on First Amendment rights, municipalities have been allowed to ban billboards when shown to be a public nuisance effecting the health and safety of the community. A lower court's decision that allowed the Baltimore, Maryland, to ban alcohol and tobacco billboards where they can be viewed by minors was upheld by the Supreme Court (Smith, 2011).

Public Intoxication

With public intoxication laws, communities can address people under the influence of alcohol or drugs who may pose a danger to themselves or others. Publicly intoxicated persons are vulnerable to robbery, assault, other criminal activity, or have the potential to drive while impaired. Public intoxication laws give law enforcement the opportunity to intervene before an impaired person drives or an impaired pedestrian walks into oncoming traffic.

Vehicle Impoundment

While not specific to alcohol use, vehicle impoundment ordinances have been used to prevent DWI offenders from repeating their crimes. Individuals caught violating impaired-driving laws typically lose their driver's license. Vehicle impoundment ordinances allow for law enforcement to impound vehicles of drivers who have suspended or revoked driving licenses. Some ordinances allow for the impoundment whether or not the impaired driver is the registered owner. Very few studies show evidence of reductions in crashes or impaired driving associated with vehicle impoundment because either the law was underused or other policies were put into place that made it difficult to assess its effectiveness (Voas & DeYoung, 2001). However, evaluations of programs in Portland, Oregon, and Franklin County, Ohio, showed that both forfeiture and immobilization were effective in reducing driving while suspended/DUI recidivism (DeYoung, 1997).

C.3.2. Enforcement Programs

High Visibility Enforcement

High-visibility enforcement (HVE) is a well-coordinated and targeted strategy of actively conducting and publicizing law enforcement activities to detect and arrest impaired drivers. Periodic high-intensity and sustained high-visibility enforcement efforts, supported by a coordinated media campaign, are proven effective countermeasures for reducing impaired-driving fatalities. Checkpoint Tennessee, a year-long high-visibility enforcement effort conducted in the mid-1990s, resulted in a 20-percent reduction in alcohol-related crashes (Lacey, Jones, & Smith, 1999). Similar enforcement and media approaches applied to seat belt use have resulted in raising seat belt use rates by a range from 2.7 to as high as 26 percentage points. (Hedlund, Gilbert, Ledingham, & Preusser, 2008, p.5; and NHTSA, 2011, p. 2-19).

The enforcement component of the HVE strategy includes a variety of enforcement activities such as saturation patrols and sobriety checkpoints. A saturation patrol is an enforcement strategy of concentrating a large number of law enforcement officers when and where impaired-driving crashes are prevalent. A sobriety checkpoint is a coordinated enforcement activity where law enforcement randomly stops persons driving on a specified roadway to check whether they are alcohol impaired. The purpose of these strategies is to deter people from driving impaired by raising the perception of the risk for detection and arrest. Communities are encouraged to support law enforcement agencies to conduct saturation patrols and sobriety checkpoints where allowable.

To help communities and law enforcement agencies implement HVE efforts, NHTSA has published the Saturation Patrols & Sobriety Checkpoints Guide: A How-to Guide for Planning and Publicizing Impaired Driving Enforcement Efforts (NHTSA, 2002), and Creating Impaired Driving General Deterrence: Eight Case Studies of Sustained, High-Visibility, Impaired-Driving Enforcement (Stuster, 2006).

Alcohol Retail Compliance Operations

Alcohol retail compliance operations or checks are typically known as sting operations. Coordinated by law enforcement agencies, these undercover operations consist of underage persons attempting to buy alcoholic beverages from an alcohol beverage retailer. If the underage person successfully purchases the alcohol, the retailer is cited which may result in a fine or loss of license to sell alcohol. These operations are intended to deter sales to minors. A study conducted in Concord, New Hampshire, shows that compliance checks may be effective in reducing sales to minors (Moore, 2007). Prior to enhanced enforcement in Concord 28.2 percent of alcohol retail licensees sold alcoholic beverages to minors compared to 10.2 percent during the compliance checks. The percentage of alcohol retailers selling to minors outside Concord was reported at 30.5 percent where compliance checks were not conducted.

Shoulder Tap Operations

These operations are intended to deter adults from purchasing alcohol for minors and alcohol retail licensees from allowing the activity to take place. Law enforcement agencies will employ or recruit underage persons to ask adults near a licensed alcohol retail store to buy alcoholic beverages for them. If an adult buys alcohol for a minor, he or she may be arrested and prosecuted. In some cases, a retail licensee may be held liable for knowingly selling alcohol to an adult who furnishes it to minors.

C.3.3. Prosecution, Adjudication, and Supervision

DWI Courts

A DWI court is a specialized court dedicated to changing the behavior of the higher risk offenders arrested for DWI. The goal of a DWI court is to protect the public by using the highly successful model of accountability, supervision, and long-term treatment. Several studies have found DWI courts successful in reducing recidivism rates among drivers arrested for impaired driving. A Michigan study of three DWI courts found DWI court offenders were up to 19 times less likely to be re-arrested for another DWI than a DWI offender in a traditional court (Carey, Fuller, & Kissick, 2008). A NHTSA study on the evaluation of three Georgia DWI Courts found participants had 65-percent lower recidivism rates than eligible nonparticipating offenders from the same counties (Fell, Tippetts, & Lanston, 2011).

Court Monitoring

Court monitors are responsible for attending, observing and recording the disposition of DWI court cases as they move through the criminal justice system. Court monitors send a strong message to judges and prosecutors that the public has an active interest in DWI issues. NHTSA research indicates that court monitoring has several positive effects on DWI adjudication, including a 10 percent higher conviction rate and a 70 percent lower dismissal rate for cases where a driver's blood alcohol concentration was at .10 or higher. According to the NHTSA study, in monitored cases where the driver refused to take a BAC test, the offender was 25 percent more likely to be convicted and case dismissal rates were 90 percent lower than in cases not monitored (Shinar, 1990).

Alcohol Ignition Interlocks

Alcohol ignition interlocks, also referred to as breath alcohol ignition interlock devices (BAIID), are devices placed on an individual's vehicle to prevent it from starting if that person has a measureable amount of alcohol in their system (usually .02 or .025 BAC). Alcohol ignition interlocks have been shown to reduce recidivism as long as the device is installed (Marques & Voas, 2010). Probation departments, courts and state licensing agencies across the country are using ignition interlock as a monitoring tool for DWI offenders. NHTSA published the Ignition Interlocks: What You Need to Know: a Toolkit for Policymakers, Highway Safety Professionals, and Advocates (NHTSA, 2009) and Key Features for Ignition Interlock Programs (NHTSA, 2010) to support widespread use and implementation of alcohol ignition interlocks.

DWI Intensive Supervision Programs

DWI intensive supervision programs are behavior modification strategies used to closely monitor DWI offenders. Designed for at-risk offenders, these programs may include electronic monitoring, increased drug/alcohol testing and unannounced home or work visits. While these programs may vary in type, the most common features include screening and assessment for extensiveness of alcohol/drug use problems, close monitoring, and jail for noncompliance. Studies have shown intensive supervision programs reduce recidivism among DWI offenders. An evaluation of intensive supervision programs in communities within Minnesota, New York, and Oregon indicated significant reductions in recidivism among participants of the program within a 5-year period (Wiliszowski, Fell, McKnight, & Tippetts, 2011, p. 55).

A promising supervision strategy started in South Dakota is the 24/7 Sobriety Program. Participants must physically report and submit to testing for alcohol or drug use twice a day. Failure to test or demonstrate abstinence may result in immediate revocation of bond, parole, or probation and in most cases, immediate incarceration. First-time impaired-driving offenders with a .17 BAC or greater and repeat offenders needing work permits are required to participate. An evaluation of the program showed only 7.4 percent of the program participants reoffended within a 3-year period compared to 13.7 percent of non-participants (Loudenburg, Drube, & Leonardson, 2010).

C.4. Treatment

C.4.1. Screening, Brief Intervention, and Referral to Treatment (SBIRT)

Alcohol Screening and Brief Intervention is explained in section C.2.1. As a result of screening, a health care provider or other professional may find that an individual may show signs of a serious alcohol use problem. Such a finding would warrant a more in-depth assessment and possible referral to treatment. Research and information on implementing SBIRT is available on the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Web sites at www.samhsa.gov/prevention/sbirt and www.cdc.gov/injuryresponse/alcohol-screening.

D. Conclusion

Many laws such as minimum legal drinking age laws, .08 BAC laws, open container laws, and seat belt laws have come into place through federal sanctions and incentives. It may take years for States to enact and effectively enforce new traffic safety laws. It is hoped that this publication will provide ideas to communities on strategies and legislation that can be implemented on a local level. It describes a number of effective and promising strategies, programs, and policies for communities to consider in assisting to reduce the incidence of impaired driving. While not all inclusive, many of these have been successfully implemented or adopted in various communities throughout the nation.

Alcohol Retail Density Limits	Madison, WI	Sec. 38.05(9)(o)1-3 Alcohol Beverage License Density Plan. 1. Purpose. The Central Commercial District currently contains at least twenty-seven percent (27%) of all alcohol beverage licenses issued by Madison (City) and at least 34 percent of all 'Class B' Combination alcohol beverage licenses issued by the city. Between 1997 and 2006, this area experienced an increase of 125 percent in the total number of alcohol beverage

		licenses and an increase of 128 percent in the number of “Class B” combination alcohol beverage licenses. Not coincidentally, this area experiences a high volume of alcohol-related problems, as detailed in the Madison Police Department's 2005 report, "Alcohol-Related Violence in Downtown Madison." As part of the ongoing comprehensive efforts to decrease the incidence of alcohol- related problems in the downtown area, the city seeks to maintain or gradually reduce the number and capacity of certain types of alcohol beverage licenses in the identified Alcohol License Density Plan area. This maintenance and/or reduction will be achieved through the licensing powers of the Alcohol License Review Committee (ALRC) and the Common Council. Additionally, the city seeks to decrease the strain on public resources caused by a high density of alcohol-related businesses while simultaneously providing opportunities in the downtown area for businesses that are either not associated with the sale of alcohol or that sell alcohol incidental to their principal business. 2. Density Plan Area. Any property located within the Central Commercial District of Madison. The Central Commercial District is defined as the area enclosed by the following boundaries: Lake Mendota shoreline between N. Park Street and Blair Street, Blair Street from Lake Mendota shoreline south/southeast to Lake Monona Shoreline, Lake Monona shoreline south/southwest from Blair Street to Monona Bay shoreline, Monona Bay shoreline from Lake Monona shoreline south/southwest to Proudfit Street, Proudfit Street from Monona Bay shoreline north/northwest to Regent Street, Regent Street west to Park Street, Park Street north to Lake Mendota shoreline. The Common Council, upon recommendation of the ALRC, may add additional areas within Madison to this Plan at any time based upon the criteria and analysis used in the Madison Police Department's 2005 report, "Alcohol-Related Violence in Downtown Madison.” 3. Procedure. a. When an application related to an alcohol beverage licensed premise within the Density Plan Area is submitted to the city clerk, the city clerk will mark the application “DPA” prior to placing the application on the next available ALRC agenda. This subsection applies to all applications related to an alcohol beverage licensed premise within the Density Plan Area (new license applications, changes to a licensed premise, transfer of a license, etc.) with the exception of renewal applications. b. The Alcohol License Review Committee will review all applications and make recommendations to the Common Council based on the criteria and guidelines contained within this subsection specifically and within Ch. 38, M.G.O. generally.

Keg Registration	Jones County, IA	CHAPTER 11 JONES COUNTY KEG REGISTRATION ORDINANCE TITLE V – PUBLIC ORDER, SAFETY & HEALTH SECTION 1. TITLE This ordinance shall be known and may be cited and referred to as the Jones County Keg Registration Ordinance. SECTION 2. PURPOSE The identification of purchasers/providers of keg alcoholic beverage for consumption by underage people is a major law enforcement concern in Jones County, Iowa. When keg alcohol is found where underage people are present it is necessary to readily identify those responsible. The investigation of crimes involving the furnishing of alcohol to minors and related crimes involving keg alcoholic beverages is inhibited by the inability to identify who purchased the keg alcohol. Registration/identification information must be available on all keg alcohol beverage in Jones County, Iowa. Individual identification number, purchaser and retail seller identity information will better enable law enforcement to identify providers of keg alcoholic beverages to underage people. Therefore, it is in the public interest to place reasonable keg registration/identification rules as hereinafter set forth. This ordinance provides for the registration and documentation of retail sales of keg alcoholic beverages. SECTION 3. REGISTRATION AND RETURN PROCEDURE All retail sales/purchases of alcoholic beverage by keg container of two gallon volume or more in Jones County, Iowa, for off-site (at a location which does not hold a liquor license) consumption must comply with the following registration, documentation and labeling requirements and

The log shall also contain some identifier of each person, owner/employee who sold to each purchaser. This information shall be kept by the seller for a minimum period of six months from the date of sale. B. Sellers shall assign, record and attach to each retail keg sold for off-site consumption an individual keg identification label/sticker, at or before the time of sale to the purchaser, and the label/sticker shall also include a prominent warning thereon that it is illegal to alter, damage or remove the label/sticker from the keg. C. Sellers of keg alcohol shall obtain the individual keg identification label/stickers from the Jones County Auditor’s Office which shall record to whom the consecutively numbered label/stickers are distributed and shall restrict the distribution of the label/stickers to licensed alcoholic beverage retailers. The Auditor shall keep the record of distribution for one year. D. Sellers shall collect a deposit in an amount set by the retailer for each keg. Purchasers shall return kegs to the retail seller where it was purchased with the individual keg identification label/sticker attached, intact and legible on or before 60 days from the date of sale or the deposit shall be forfeited. E. Sellers shall record the date on which the keg is returned, who returned the keg and indicate whether the keg identification label/sticker is present or absent by notation on the log. F. Sellers shall remove the individual keg identification label/stickers from the kegs when they are returned and shall maintain them with the corresponding keg registration records. G.
