

Let's Be Careful Crossing the Street

Lots of kids think they can cross the street safely by themselves before they are 10 years old.

But James, who is 5, and his mother both know he is too young to cross by himself. James is learning to stop, and look left-right-left to see if cars are coming. James knows that he and his mom need to wait until all cars go by before they can cross.

Color James and his mommy safely crossing the street.
